Tammy Marquardt leaves Osgoode Hall Thursday after being granted bail by the Ontario Court of Appeal. Marquardt was convicted of murder on the basis of a discredited pathologist's testimony.

'This is my day'

Court grants bail to mom convicted of killing son

Tammy Marquardt watched for years from prison as case after case involving a child's death and the testimony of a now disgraced pathologist was reopened and wondered when it would be her turn.

Thursday, 14 years after being convicted of killing her two-year-old son, Marquardt was granted bail.

Though the courts haven't yet decided if they will hear her appeal, Marquardt was beaming after being released.

"Today I finally have my day," Marquardt said outside the Ontario Court of Appeal, struggling to catch her breath through her tears. "This is my day. I'm out. I made it."

She was the last known parent who remained behind bars based on the testimony of Dr. Charles Smith. Marquardt was convicted of second-degree murder in the death of her son Kenneth and was handed a life sentence in 1995.

She said she found the boy tangled in his bed-sheets, but Smith said he was smothered or strangled.

Marquardt's lawyer James Lockyer said not only did she not kill her son, but no crime was ever committed. Kenneth had seven documented trips to hospital for seizures, Lockyer said.

Goudge inquiry

- Last October, the Goudge inquiry into Ontario's pediatric pathology system criticized Dr. Charles Smith for "irresponsible" testimony in a series of child death cases.

You have nothing to fear, Toronto researchers find

In a scientific development that seems ripped from the script of the 2004 movie Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind, Toronto researchers have shown they can find and selectively erase fear memories from the brains of mice.

The research, which is exciting others in the field, is notable not just because the team managed to zap fear memories. The fact it found where the memories were stored in the first place is being hailed as a major accomplishment.

"This really then is a proof of principle that these are really the neurons that are involved in storing this kind of memory," said Dr. Michael Salter, head of the program in neurosciences and mental health at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children, where the research team is based.

The study, published

Thursday in the journal Science, was led by Sheena Josselyn and Paul Frankland, partners in research and in life. Josselyn — the senior author — described the work in an interview that was podcast by Science.

City finds 'solution' to bottles

The City of Toronto has found a new weapon in its battle against bottled water: Hockey tape. Black tape now covers the buttons that dispense bottled water from vending machines at City Hall, preventing would-be customers from seeing that the machines sell water. And Coun. Glenn De Baeremaeker says Pepsi Bottling Group, which owns the machines, has agreed to remove the offending water by Friday. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

No better deal for Chrysler, CAW says

The president of the Canadian Auto Workers says his union will "absolutely not" concede more to Chrysler than it did to General Motors, despite a threat that Chrysler will pull out of Canada if it can't reduce its labour costs by 25 per cent.

"There's going to be absolutely no walking away from the pattern bargained," Ken Lewenza said in an interview Thursday.

"If they out-and-out say, 'Sorry Ken, we're not going to meet the pattern,' then we're not going to get an agreement in Canada."

Chrysler president Tom LaSorda told a Parliamentary committee Wednesday night that the troubled automaker could shut down its plants in Canada, putting about 10,000 people out of work, if it doesn't get substantial wage concessions, roughly $2.3 billion US in aid from the federal and Ontario governments and a resolution to a long-running tax dispute.

But Lewenza said the CAW will stick to pattern bargaining with Chrysler, meaning the union will ask the company to accept a deal similar to that reached with GM last weekend.

Chrysler threats downplayed

AUTOS Ontario's economic development minister is playing down threats by Chrysler to pull out of Canada, saying the automaker was simply laying out its worst-case scenario.

"I know (Chrysler president) Tom LaSorda, he's a great Canadian and he's not somebody who wants to be known as the guy who shut down Chrysler," Michael Bryant said Thursday.

"It was a ham-fisted way of expressing the reality that, in the absence of an agreement, Chrysler's going to face critical challenges."

Bryant said the province is still in talks with the automaker, adding there's a bailout deal to be had as long as Chrysler can prove it has a viable business plan.

AUTOS Greenpeace activists blocked a main gate at the Pickering nuclear station Thursday to demand that nuclear energy be replaced with green energy.

Three activists tied themselves to a flatbed truck carrying a large caricature of Energy Minister George Smitherman with a

Smitherman should explain why he won't replace the Pickering nuclear station with green energy when the reactors reach the end of their lives in 2013, said Greenpeace spokesman Shawn-Patrick Stensil. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ash trees could be gone in 10 years

BEETLE Toronto's ash trees could be gone in as little as 10 years, killed by an unstoppable beetle that is spreading rapidly across the province, the city's forestry czar says.

"It's the elimination of a genus from this part of the continent, which is absolutely staggering," said Richard Ubbens, the city's director of urban forestry.

The emerald ash borer beetle, native to parts of east and central Asia, has been eroding the ash population of the northeastern United States and southwestern Ontario for years.

Liberals question why Tamils delayed at border

RE-ENTRY About 1,000 Tamil Canadians returning to Toronto by bus from the U.S. were delayed last month by Canadian border officials for up to seven hours before finally being allowed re-entry at the Fort Erie border crossing.

The Feb. 21 incident sparked tough questions by Liberal MPs at a Commons committee yesterday, and left Canada Border Services Agency president Stephen Rigby unable to explain what he called an "unacceptable" situation.

According to a passenger, the bus left Toronto Feb. 19 around 11 p.m., had no delay entering the U.S. and drove through the night to a massive rally in Washington the next day, on Feb. 20.

Opposition backs bully reporting plan

Proposed legislation forcing teachers to report serious incidents to school principals is long overdue and should include ways to deal with the causes of violence, opposition critics said yesterday.

Progressive Conservative Elizabeth Witmer said children who are bullied or harassed at school have spent too many years fending for themselves.

"It is time, it is overdue, that this government demonstrate leadership, and take every possible step to protect our students," Witmer said.

"This a dark part of our education system that we need to continue to address."

While she welcomed the step, Witmer told the legislature she's disappointed the proposed changes will only take effect next February — not at the start of the school year in September. NDP education critic Rosario Marchese said his party will support the bill, but wants it to also address the causes of violence.

"Mandatory reporting doesn't deal with the issues that we should be talking about," like mental illness and substance abuse, Marchese said.

"Some of these kids are sexually abused and some of these kids bring the violence into the school."

The proposed bill will clarify the role of all school staff and enhance guidelines about reporting incidents of homophobia, sexual harassment and inappropriate sexual behaviour.

The new rules mean teachers would have to report to a principal any incidents of violence that may result in suspension or expulsion, and the principal would have to report it to parents. THE CANADIAN PRESS

MILESTONE In one year, the first Winter Paralympics to be held in Canada will kick off in Vancouver, and the milestone was marked in celebrations across the country Thursday.

Jim Armstrong, who is hoping to be on Canada's wheelchair curling team, said competing at home will be a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for athletes.

"In Canada, we have well over three million people with some type of disability, and less than three per cent actually participate in any kind of sport," he said at a celebration outside the Vancouver Art Gallery.

Donors could face prosecution

BLACKLIST More than 100 Canadians from coast to coast are facing prosecution for chipping in to buy a plane ticket for a Montrealer who has taken refuge inside the Canadian Embassy in Sudan.

A lawyer for Abousfian Abdelrazik said Thursday that those contributing financially to his plane fare can be charged under Canadian law because his name is still on a UN terrorist blacklist.

But donors remained defiant in the face of the possibility they could spend 10 years behind bars.

One rescued after chopper sinks

Helicopter was ferrying workers to offshore rigs

Officials say they can't explain why they didn't receive signals from water-activated locator beacons attached to the survival suits worn by oil workers aboard a helicopter that crashed Thursday off the coast of Newfoundland.

One person was rescued and one body recovered after the Sikorsky chopper, ferrying 18 workers and crew to offshore rigs, ditched at 9:18 a.m., capsized and sank in 120 metres of water.

Problems

- The Sikorsky S-92, which can seat about two dozen, was on its way to two of the three production platforms on the Grand Banks when the pilot reported problems and turned the aircraft around to head back to St. John's, N.L.

"There were no signals whatsoever from any of the PLBs (personal locator beacons)," said Maj. Denis McGuire, a spokesman for the Rescue Co-ordination Centre in Halifax.

He stressed the lack of signals did not indicate the beacons had failed to work.

He said the search for survivors would continue through the night.

The rescued man — Robert Decker of St. John's, N.L. — was pulled from the water by another helicopter and flown to the Health Sciences Centre in St. John's. He was listed in critical, but stable condition.

Prisoners plotted escape for months unnoticed: Report

SASKATCHEWAN A report into how six prisoners facing violent charges managed to escape from a Saskatchewan jail paints a picture of ineffective staff and a failing building.

The report, which examined how the prisoners broke out of the Regina Provincial Correctional Centre last August, says the men toiled away at their escape plan for months and dozens of workers failed to see what was happening.

"Inmates on Unit 3A went about the business of digging out through the wall undetected by less than vigilant staff for a period of approximately four months," says the report.

WHAT IS COSMELAN De-Pigmentation?

Cosmelan® helps in the depigmentation of those patients suffering from melasma, a skin condition which presents itself as dark, or brown, patches normally found on both sides of the face and most commonly in areas of the cheek, bridge of the nose, the forehead and upper lip area. Although there is no known cause of melasma, those who have a genetic predisposition to the condition are common sufferers. Also if you have been, or currently are pregnant, it has been shown that hormonal changes can as well trigger a form of melasma, known as chloasma, otherwise known as the "mask of pregnancy". Cosmelan® was developed to help in the inhibiting of the basic enzyme, tyrosinase, that occurs in the melanin formation process and acts in blocking this enzyme producer and may invert the metabolic process from occurring within the transformation chain. Cosmelan® treatments are perfectly suited for those of medium fair to darker complexions as these skin tones enhance the look of melasma and patients can expect a 95% improvement with respect to the removal of the melasma blemishes.

Financier pleads guilty to swiping billions

Bernard Madoff pleaded guilty Thursday to an epic Ponzi scheme that defrauded investors worldwide of billions of dollars, avoiding eye contact with investors before he was led out of court with his hands cuffed behind his back.

U.S. District Judge Denny Chin denied bail for Madoff, 70, and ordered him to jail, noting that he had the means to flee and an incentive to do so because of his age.

"I am actually grateful for this opportunity to publicly comment about my crimes, for which I am deeply sorry and ashamed," Madoff said. "As the years went by, I realized my risk, and this day would inevitably come. I cannot adequately express how sorry I am for my crimes."

Madoff did not look at any of the three investors who spoke at the hearing, even when one of them turned in his direction and tried to address him.

Madoff entered guilty pleas to all 11 counts he was charged with, including fraud, perjury, theft

Officials mum over Canadian spy drone crash in Kandahar

INVESTIGATION One of Canada's leased spy drones has had its wings clipped in a tarmac mishap at Kandahar Airfield — an incident that has raised questions about accountability when private corporations are invited on to the battlefield.

No one was injured in the January accident, which involved an Heron unmanned surveillance vehicle, but the air force has kept it and the resulting investigation secret.

At first, the military flatly refused to answer questions, even trying to prevent publication of this Canadian Press story. Publicity surrounding the incident would give the Taliban a "battle damage assessment," it argued.

The military eventually relented, and released a terse statement that confirmed the incident took place, that no one had been injured and that no Canadian military personnel were involved.

Canadian worker abducted in Sudan

Three international aid workers, including a Montreal nurse, and two Sudanese guards have been abducted in Darfur just a week after the government in Khartoum ordered many aid groups expelled in response to an international arrest warrant against the nation's president, officials said Thursday.

The kidnappings — believed to be the first of westerners in Darfur — took place late Wednesday in a rural area about 200 kilometres west of the city of El Fasher, said Nouredine Mezni, a spokesman for UN peacekeepers in Khartoum.

Mezni said the aid workers belonged to the Belgian branch of Doctors Without Borders and they were taken from their offices in the Saraf Umra area. The Sudanese guards abducted with them were later released.

The Canadian nurse was identified as Laura Archer, who is originally from P.E.I., but had been living in Montreal.

Doctors Without Borders spokeswoman Susan Sanders said Thursday that "armed men came into the compound last night" and took the hostages.

Along with Archer, an Italian doctor and a French co-ordinator are still being held, she said.

German gunman warned of plans online

CHAT ROOM The teenage German gunman who killed 15 people at his former school before taking his own life warned of his plans in an Internet chat room and said he was "sick of this life," officials said Thursday.

The 17-year-old suspect, whose name appears as Tim Kretschmer in police documents, told others in the chat room he planned to attack his school in Winnenden, said Baden Württemberg state Interior Minister Heribert Rech.

Rech said the suspect wrote, "You will hear from me tomorrow, remember the name of a place called Winnenden."

"I'm serious. ... I have a weapon here," Rech said the youth wrote. "Early tomorrow morning I will go to my former school."

A woman comforts a child Thursday in front of the Albertville school in Winnenden, Germany, where a 17-year-old gunman killed 15 people on Wednesday.

A Bavarian man told police about the chat after the shooting had taken place, Rech said. He told authorities his 17-year-old son only told him about it after seeing the news reports and had not taken the threat seriously.

Lawless loan rip-off

Marketplace

Erica Johnson

metronews.ca/johnson

When Floyd Girouard needed a loan recently, he went to the bank where he'd been a longtime customer. But this trucker from Abbotsford, B.C., says because he didn't own his house, or any other collateral, the bank turned him down.

So Girouard turned to the Internet and found a "loan company" willing to loan him $30,000 — with a hitch. The company told Girouard his credit history was poor, so he had to give it a 10 per cent deposit before it would release the loan. Girouard reluctantly wired the company $3,000, and never heard from it again.

Turns out, the company was a scam. It's illegal to ask for an upfront payment for a loan. And that company is just one of hundreds that have exploded on the Internet, cashing in on vulnerable people applying for loans in these tough economic times. Last year, scammers like this bilked Canadians out of an estimated $60 million.

Trouble is, the scammers know all the tricks of the trade, so people easily get sucked in. They run professional-looking websites, with catchy graphics and simple instructions for applying for a loan. They give addresses (usually in the United States, but they're often based in Canada). And when we checked out some of those addresses in high-rise office buildings, the suites had been empty for months, or didn't actually exist. They use 1-800 numbers that are hard to trace and were likely purchased online using phoney identification. Their websites are often hosted on servers in other countries, which makes shutting them down time consuming. And by the time police investigate, these rip-off loan companies have shut down and reopened under another name.

Durham Police recently busted an online loan scam they claim had ripped people off to the tune of $2 million. Inside houses and apartments they found computers, cellphones, paper shredders and phoney loan documents — everything needed to sucker innocent people desperate for a loan.

So, what do you watch out for if you're looking for a loan online? Never trust a "loan company" that guarantees a loan even if you have bad credit.

Stay away from a "loan company" that asks for an upfront payment (like a security deposit, premium or insurance). And definitely run if the "loan company" asks for a payment to be wired via Western Union or Money Gram.

Floyd Girouard wishes it wasn't a $3,000 lesson.

"I haven't had the best of luck on finances my entire life," he says. "And I just ... sat back in my chair and cried."

Unsung hero helps abused escape

UrbanAffairs

April Lindgren

metronews.ca/lindgren

It's Amandeep Kaur's job to help women escape the men in their lives who use fists to communicate. It's not the sort of work that involves sitting in an office and waiting for women to come to you.

Kaur, who manages the domestic violence program at Brampton's Punjabi Community Health Services, is often out in the community actively trying to rescue women — many of them immigrants who don't speak English — from increasingly dangerous situations.

Kaur personally went out at midnight one night to pick up a woman who could not get a cab and was stuck at home with a drunken, verbally abusive husband. She travelled from her office in Peel to a Canadian Tire outlet in York Region after receiving a call about a woman who had come to work with telltale bumps and bruises.

Kaur, who told her own story of domestic abuse in Deepa Mehta's documentary Let's Talk About It, will balk at being called a hero. But it takes determination and guts to approach terrified women and to convince them they have options. There's a screenplay in this somewhere. And there are signs of hope. A growing number of unsung heroes, it seems, are prepared to act if they notice that a friend, relative, colleague, neighbour or employee has too many inexplicably blackened eyes, split lips and broken bones.

"Amandeep Kaur, who told her own story of domestic abuse in Deepa Mehta's documentary Let's Talk About It, will balk at being called a hero."

"We receive calls from employers, concerned neighbours and friends," Kaur said in an interview. "Word is getting out that help is available."

The Punjabi centre's call-in line guarantees anonymity and there is no caller ID. But tipsters nonetheless often worry out loud the abusers will discover their involvement or they will be summoned to court as witnesses.

The fact is, though, there are people who pick up the phone and make the call despite their concerns. Showing you care takes courage. And it's a testament to a deep strain of fundamental human decency in the big city — something it's easy to forget exists in these difficult times.

Atheists still atheists in bad economic times

I have to say that I was quite offended when I was reading Metro (March 12) and saw the headline "Queen's Park: There Are No Atheists In A Recession."

I'm an atheist myself and, trust me, even in the grips of something truly negative — the majority of us don't sell out our beliefs and pray for help to something that we don't have faith in.

Take your time and eat it all up

RE: Mark Trealout (Slow-food movement just tastes better, March 5)

It's true, slow food does taste better. Mark Trealout was correct when he said "the average urbanite has no idea how to raise a pig, harvest wheat, or store the summer's bounty for winter use."

While a lot of people understand the movement conceptually, we in the restaurant industry and local leaders need to give people good guidance on how to become fully involved.

The first step is definitely the Internet. Through a few basic searches, readers will find suppliers, retailers and restaurants that have embraced the cause here in Toronto, but also throughout Canada. However, a true understanding for the purpose of the slow-food movement can only be developed by tasting the end product.

Anyone with the slightest interest can easily make a reservation at a restaurant that participates in producing high-quality slow food from local communities to see and learn what we're all about. There's no tastier and more fulfilling place to start.

stocks, ETFs are comprised of packages of shares, bonds or other securities and usually track a broad sector, currency or index.

Inverse ETFs flip that concept on its head — if the TSX main index falls by five per cent, for example, the inverse ETF fund would increase by five per cent in value.

The funds accomplish that through transactions in various derivatives designed to profit from a drop in the underlying benchmark. The obvious risk is they will also lose value when things improve on stock markets.

Farine finds a home down east

MATTHEW WUEST
matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

When Simon Farine decided he was done with NCAA basketball, his phone started ringing off the hook.

Canadian universities — including Dalhousie in Halifax — clamoured to recruit the 6-foot-2 guard from the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, well aware of his ability to be a star.

So how did Farine, a Toronto native and former standout at Northern, end up at Dalhousie, where the Tigers had lost 108 of their past 140 games and were in shambles when Farine committed in 2006?

"I really wish I could take credit for it, but I can't," admitted Tigers head coach John Campbell.

What it boiled down to for Farine was that a group of his friends — non-basketball players — had enrolled at Dal in 2005 when he went south. When Farine didn't enjoy his experience in the U.S., he simply wanted to rejoin his buddies.

"I thought I'd be happier back in Canada," said Farine, who averaged nine minutes and 1.4 points as a freshman at UWGB. "I said, 'You know what? I'll try it out.' It's one of the best decisions I've made in my life."

Farine, who leads the sixth-seeded Tigers into the Final 8 Canadian Interuniversity Sport championship in Ottawa this weekend, has turned Dal's program around. Last weekend, he powered Dal to its first Atlantic University Sport banner since 1996, averaging 29.6 points, 7.6 rebounds and six assists and winning playoff MVP.

"His arrival was a big turning point for us," said Campbell. "It's paid dividends, not only on the court with his play, but from a recruiting standpoint things got a lot easier once he got here. Players wanted to play with him."

Farine is the Tigers' point guard and primary scoring option, as his 45-point effort in the AUS quarter-finals indicates. But he also makes good use of his teammates. When the St. Francis Xavier X-Men keyed on him in the AUS final, he got the ball to teammate Josh Beattie, who hit five straight three-pointers for 17 points in a 3:20 span.

"He makes a world of difference for us," Beattie said. "He makes playing so easy. He creates for everybody else. He's one of the big reasons we're so successful."

The Tampa Bay Lightning were tired after an overtime loss in Ottawa the previous night, but they had enough left to overpower the Maple Leafs 4-1 Thursday.

There were exhibition games played in Air Canada Centre in years past that had more intensity than the first half of this one.

Stempniak scored the only goal of a flatliner of a first period that included only 12 shots on goal.

Tampa Bay outshot Toronto 16-5 in the second period. The Leafs got their third power-play chance when Jeff Halpern high-sticked John Mitchell at 7:11 of the third. They managed to get a shot on Karri Ramo this time but they couldn't tie it. Anton Stralman took his second penalty of the night at 13:06 and Malone's 24th, from Gerber's doorstep at 14:35, put this one in the win column for Tampa Bay. Leafs coach Ron Wilson was ejected in the last minute for arguing with the referees.

Something to celebrate

JustSoccer

Ben Rycroft

metronews.ca/justsoccer

Canadians Amy Walsh, Brittany Timko and Jodi-Ann Robinson during the 2008 Olympics in Beijing.

Years of men's national team disappointments, along with the mind-boggling frustrations of Canadian soccer bureaucracy, have given plenty of soccer people plenty of reason to be negative over the years.

That cynicism hit its peak last year when the men's national squad ungracefully bowed out from World Cup qualifying.

It was widely considered the strongest team in a generation and the dramatic underperformances by players and coaches alike has led to a lot of finger pointing since.

There are plenty of problems (only one warm-up game for the men's national side before the Gold Cup? Come on CSA, you can do better) but, frankly, it's time to stop dwelling on the negative.

There is plenty to celebrate in Canadian soccer — like the women's national team.

Scoff if you want, but under the new direction of Italian coach Carolina Morace, the women's squad, which is presently rolling past its competition at the Cyprus Cup, is looking every bit a contender for its World Cup in 2011.

Who cares about a women's World Cup?

Well, more than one million people attended the 2007 World Cup in China. The average game attendance topped 36,000. Safe to say a few people cared.

To put that in perspective — the average attendance, thus far, at the men's World Baseball Classic has been a paltry 21,000 — meaning women's soccer is more popular than men's baseball. It's something to think about.

Morace has brought a level of tactical knowledge that has been missing in Canadian soccer for some time, and with her at the helm, players like Amy Walsh (who just played her 100th international game for Canada) and Christine Sinclair (rapidly approaching 100 international goals scored) will be well positioned when the journey towards the women's World Cup begins next week.

Dude, where's my hug?

Rudd, Segel turn on the platonic romance in I Love You, Man

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

In these trying times audiences crave escape and nothing is entertaining today's masses more than platonic romances between dudes. The latest entry in this odd subgenre is the explicitly titled I Love You, Man — opening next Friday.

The film stars Paul Rudd (Role Models) and Jason Segel (Forgetting Sarah Marshall), who are pleased to be in a film that accurately depicts male friendships as awkward, honest, and rewarding rather than an emotionally empty haven for dirty talk and booze.

"I hope the movie shatters stereotypes and breaks down the barriers that will allow men to hug without patting," says Segel, who is quick to point out that the movie is equally realistic toward how women relate to each other.

"I've met ex-girlfriends' friends who have said things like 'I know about you, Mr. One Ball,'" says Segel, ironically clarifying, "It was a soccer accident.

"I think women are much dirtier when they're talking to their friends than men and we confront that. Paul's character is an emotionally stifled guy towards men and not women, which I've never seen in a movie before."

Rudd plays a character who has dedicated so much time to his girlfriends that he doesn't have a single male friend to be the best man at his wedding. This leads to an awkward series of mandates to fill the position.

The movie is filled with scenes that milk awkwardness for laughs. To increase the realism, director John Hamburg (Safe Men) encouraged improvisation.

"Awkward comedy is best when you're not thinking about what you're trying to say or memorizing anything," Rudd says.

Segel agrees, pointing to an improvised scene in which their characters hang out for the first time.

"I think that scene works best in improv because you want genuine laughs from the actors. You want the moment where he's taking a sip of beer and I intentionally do an Andre The Giant impression to force a spit take."

Segel and Rudd get plenty of laughs as the leads, but Hamburg also stacked the supporting cast with comedy talent, ensuring that every scene is packed with hilarity.

Everyone involved with the project is deservedly proud, especially Rudd.

"In the best possible scenario, I hope that people look back on this as the film that finally stopped world hunger, created world peace, and brought us peacefully and lovingly into the 22nd century," he said.

The Last House on the Left

KEVIN COURRIER
for Metro Canada

REVIEW The Last House on the Left, a remake of Wes Craven's 1972 low-budget exercise in brutal sadism, certainly delivers on the carnage. Only director Dennis Iliadis turns the whole sodden affair ultimately into a tribute to good ol' family values.

Last House centres on a gang of hoodlums who kidnap two young women in a remote rural retreat.

They viciously rape and shoot one, while slowly gutting the other to death with a knife. But one of the girls, Mari (Sara Paxton), has the fortitude to swim home to her family.

Before she gets there, though, the gang has already arrived seeking shelter. They don't know that the occupants are Mari's parents, John (Tony Goldwyn), a decent middle-class doctor and his caring wife, Emma (Monica Potter). When her parents ultimately discover the nature of their deeds, they take violent revenge on the killers.

Craven, who served as producer on the remake, describes Last House as being about "the painful side effects of revenge." Who's he kidding? The picture spends more time inflicting pain than contemplating any of its side effects.

REVIEW I have a suspicion that comic actors Trevor

Moore and Zach Cregger might actually be funny — but you'd never know it by watching the duo's big-screen debut in Miss March.

An unoriginal and gratifyingly unfunny road-trip movie, Miss March simply tells the story of a high-school virgin (Cregger) who, after slipping into a ridiculous four-year coma, is awakened by his baseball bat-wielding buddy

Discovering his teenage sweetheart has since become a Playboy bunny, the pals hit the highway in an attempt to track down the oh-so lucky gal at Hugh Hefner's mansion. Yawn.

Now you may be wondering, how did two members of a little-known Internet sketch troupe called the Whitest Kids U' Know get handed the keys to their own movie? I'm not sure. It certainly isn't evident on the screen.

According to Wikipedia the definition of coma is "a profound state of unconsciousness." They can be caused by head trauma or any number of phenomenon and they are, as The Smiths sang in their Top 20 hit Girlfriend in a Coma, "really serious." They are also an unlikely inspiration for all manner of pop culture confections from pop songs — both Guns 'N Roses and Stone Temple Pilots have sung about them — to this weekend's Miss March, a comedy about a twenty-something who comes out of a four-year coma to find his high-school sweetheart has become a centrefold in Playboy magazine.

The most famous movie to use a coma as a plot device is 1978's Coma. In this medical thriller Geneviève Bujold is Dr. Susan Wheeler, a surgery resident at Boston Hospital who uncovers foul play after her best friend is scheduled for a routine procedure but instead slips into a coma and dies.

Determined to discover how her friend expired she digs into the hospital's medical records only to discover dozens of cases of patients who have passed away under similar, mysterious circumstances. Her investigation leads to uncovering the nefarious secret of Operating Room 8.

On the lighter side, a German movie called Good Bye Lenin! sees a Socialist woman wake up from a long coma. East and West Germany have reunited and the world she knew is gone.

After doctors tell her son that any shock to her system could be fatal he takes pains to make her comfortable by recreating her beloved East Germany in their house. It's a touching film about a son's love for his mother, but also an energetic satire about the fall of the Berlin Wall.

Uma Thurman's character in Kill Bill wakes up from a coma to unleash hell on her enemies.

Quentin Tarantino used a coma as a way to introduce the Uma Thurman character in his revenge epic Kill Bill. Shot and left for dead at her wedding, The Bride (Thurman) wakes up four years later determined to get bloody vengeance on everyone who double-crossed her. This is a good example of a movie using the "Sleeping Beauty" effect whereby recovery from a comatose state is instantaneous and absolute. In truth, after laying in a coma for years, The Bride would require massive physiotherapy to even begin to bring back the muscle tone required to wage holy hell on her enemies.

Not everyone is happy about the portrayal of comatose patients in movies. One doctor, Eelco Wijdicks of the Mayo Clinic, is pushing for more realism. A recent study published in Neurology magazine showed 39 per cent of viewers would allow portrayals of coma victims on film to influence their decision making should a relative ever become comatose.

"This misrepresentation in both U.S. and foreign moves is problematic," he said.

For a more realistic look at comas check out the drama Reversal of Fortune or, better yet, have a look at Liz Garbus' documentary Coma which explores the mysteries of the injured brain and its ability to heal by following four coma survivors over the course of a year.

Nothing new in Race

Race to Witch Mountain

There are two things Disney did right with their latest family film Race to Witch Mountain.

First, by re-visiting the popular hit Escape to Witch Mountain, the Mouse House will surely attract many-a-parent who grew up fascinated by the 1975 classic. Second, they hired Dwayne (The Rock) Johnson, the former wrestling champ who has begun to establish himself a formidable attraction for kids in hits like The Game Plan.

On the web

- To see a Race to Witch Mountain trailer, or for local screen times, visit metronews.ca/movies

While those two elements will surely be enough to put Witch Mountain ahead in the box-office race this weekend, the movie doesn't hold the kitschy appeal of its source of inspiration.

A hasty adventure set in Las Vegas, the story begins when cab driver Jack Bruno (Johnson) picks up two teens (AnnaSophia Robb, Alexander Ludwig) whose strange behaviour would only be excusable if they were extraterrestrials (alas, they are!).

When he learns that government agents and a dangerous alien bounty hunter called a Siphon are on their tail, Bruno is convinced to help the pair save the planet.

Directed by Andy Fickman (The Game Plan), Race to Witch Mountain definitely plays down the charm and amps up the action on its namesake. From the opening minutes, the movie is basically all about the thrill of the chase.

Sure, the effect-heavy drama has its share of entertaining explosions and near-collisions but these sequences offer little in the way of anything fresh.

Still, while nostalgic adults may have to suffer through Johnson's attempts to tiptoe around clunky dialogue, the kiddies will likely revel in the spooky Siphon and the cathartic thrill of it all. Hey, it worked for Disney in 1975 after all.

Knowing the near future

FEATURE You might call this the Year of the Catastrophe. Now I don't intend to sound morbidly pessimistic but with the dwindling economy and a mass of overwhelming global issues, it's sadly a notion that may cut close to the bone for some.

More so, with a handful of bleak films coming out this year (including next Friday's release of Knowing) it would seem Hollywood filmmakers aren't holding out much hope either. Or are they?

"I feel like we're in a period of history when we're never really sure where the bad stuff is going to come from," said Knowing director Alex Proyas during a recent interview in New York.

"Whenever a horrible event happens, it seems to take us all by surprise and we reel in horror but we're also aghast at the fact we didn't see it coming. I think the movie is very much a product of its time."

Starring Nicolas Cage as a professor who discovers a document that appears to predict every major disaster of the past five decades, the mystery of the scripture unfolds when he suspects the final clue points to what might be the end of the world.

"We're living in stressful times — global warming, tensions between countries — all these things are very present right now," admitted Cage.

"So what all artists try to do intuitively is be relevant and grapple with or redefine or make sense of what's going on."

Knowing does not stand alone in 2009 among provocative films steeped in bleak premonitions either.

Roland Emmerich's apocalyptic thriller 2012; the dreary drama The Road and even Terminator: Salvation are all soon-to-be-released chronicles of a grim near-future.

In such a recessive climate however, it is still to be determined how the public (who often see movies to escape from reality) will accept this new trend — a concern not lost on the star of Knowing.

"Personally, I don't have a problem with escapist entertainment," admitted Cage. "I think it's good for you and I want to contribute in that but I also want to make movies that can hopefully get you talking afterwards and have some interesting conversations about the big questions. How you choose to receive that is up to you."

ANNE BRODIE
for Metro Canada

Harrison Ford's usual heroics are toned down significantly in this low budget anthology style drama. He plays a California immigration officer whose job is to collar illegal immigrants and send them packing, even as he indulges in fantasies of rescuing them.

Max Brogan is compromised like every character in Crossing Over. His is just one of the diverse stories that intersect on the theme of immigration.

We meet illegals willing to give their money, souls and dreams to make it to America — like an aspiring Australian actress (Alice Eve) who agrees to pay an immigration official (Ray Liotta) to fast track her green card application with two months of sexual slavery.

A young Asian boy participates in a gang shooting in a convenience store the day before his swearing in. A policeman, an Iranian immigrant, kills his friends and in an act of random kindness, frees him to attend the ceremony.

An English musician (Jim Sturgess) benefits from an act of kindness by a canny rabbi. An immigration lawyer (Ashley Judd) realizes that she can no longer just defend her clients, but must walk the walk to do good.

Kindness is rare in the streets and detention centres. A 15-year-old Muslim high school student delivers an inflammatory speech which tears her family apart. A Mexican woman makes a fatal mistake in attempting to cross the border illegally.

U.K.-born writer director Wayne Kramer knows what he's talking about. He faced his own obstacles trying to emigrate to Hollywood.

He shows us that behind the faces singing the national anthem at an induction ceremony is joy mixed with compromise, humiliation and sacrifice.

While the film veers into heavy-handed stereotyping and quick fixes, it has a strong point of view. Some will compare it unfavourably to Crash, but the truth is, intersecting anthologies are effective and truer to life than not.

RiP highlights copyright issue

IAN GORMELY
for Metro Canada

FEATURE Leaked albums, lawsuits and an industry on its knees have been the public face in the war over intellectual property so far. But Brett Gaylor wants to change that with his film RiP: A Remix Manifesto.

The film lays out a battle between corporate forces determined to place legal bonds and a price tag on copyrighted material and an Internet movement — the copy-fighters — pushing for a free, open source approach.

Prior to filming, Gaylor had little interest in the legal rights of ideas. He was introduced to the subject through his love of remix culture.

Through that interest Gaylor discovered party DJ Greg Gillis who, under his stage name Girl Talk, is the living embodiment of the copy-fight movement. Gillis specializes in mash-ups — blending two songs together, usually the vocal of one over the music of another.

Screenings

- RiP: A Remix Manifesto begins screenings today in Toronto.

But by manipulating the copyrighted work of others, Girl Talk is breaking the law.

"He's making his music by remixing the whole entire history of music," Gaylor said.

Gaylor knew converting the uninitiated meant that the film had to move beyond the debate over music and make a connection with farther-reaching intellectual property laws.

Major drug companies, for instance, are loath to give up patent rights on drugs so no-name versions can be cheaply made and distributed in poor countries.

"(The debate) has been framed as a kid stealing songs," he says, but it's a much broader debate.

"There's a whole other side to this story that you might not have thought about."

Gomorrah compelling

Gomorrah

RAFAEL BRUSILOV
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Gomorrah simmers slowly but results in a more flavourful stew than if it had simply boiled over like so many lesser mob movies.

The film traces the everyday lives of Naples' Camorra crime syndicate, an outfit by many accounts thought to be much larger than the famed Mafia of Sicily. Rather than glamorize or pronounce judgment on the Camorra and its denizens, the film instead chooses to weave together five separate but related stories and let viewers come to their own conclusions.

In Gomorrah no one is innocent, although it's hard to hold it against them as the bleak economic reality makes crime the only thing that seems to pay. One narrative, for example, deals with a young boy who must sell out a loved one to secure a future with the gang while another chronicles a master counterfeiter who risks everything for a lucrative gig covertly helping a

The fly-on-the-wall narrative director Matteo Garrone establishes with liberal use of a hand-held camera gives the story a gritty realism devoid of the caricatured machismo so many mob movies fall back on when they have nothing meaningful left to say.

Everything looks stripped and desolate, from pock-marked concrete slum-jungles to abandoned gas stations overgrown with foot-high weeds. Real mob life, apparently, is no picnic of luxury cars and Versace suits.

Despite the movie's quality however, it's not without some serious flaws. It's overlong, possibly by 30 minutes or more, and the story tends to be disjointed and messy. Not content to wrap things up neatly, the film sometimes feel like a pastiche of five different movies, chopped up, shaken together and served to the viewer like a cold, mixed-up fruit salad as a main course.

Ultimately though the first principle of storytelling is to mostly show, not tell. While Gomorrah could stand to tell a little more, what it does show is certainly compelling.

Silver screen gold for tough times

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Shame about that whole recession thing, isn't it? Last year you were basking in your economic glory and picked up a plasma television thinking that the ludicrous balance in your chequing account would never go down.

Now that account is overdrawn and the gigantic TV is currently the fourth wall in the damaged cardboard box you call a home. No sir, things aren't going well — but on the plus side you can still watch DVDs.

In these trying times we're happy to present a list of films that will hopefully make the recession slide by a little easier.

MONEY IS THE ROOT OF ALL EVIL

Sure, some extra money would be nice right about now, but never forget how quickly good fortune can transform into murderous greed. Just ask William H. Macy's character in the Coen Brothers' Fargo. His good intentions to increase the family nest egg lead to imprisonment, a murdered wife, a dead father-in-law, and a "funny lookin' guy in a wood chipper."

Then of course there are Bill Paxton and Billy Bob Thornton's downtrodden rural brothers in A Simple Plan. They planned to better their lower class existence with a bag of stolen drug money only to be surrounded by a pile of corpses and useless marked bills.

The history of cinema is filled with such stories. Not even Humphrey Bogart could avoid that fate in The Treasure Of The Sierra Madre. Seriously, if Bogie can't overcome the perils of greed, what hope do you have?

MONEY CAN'T BUY HAPPINESS

Even if you can manage to get your hands on some coin without killing your closest friends, you might find that all the cash will only make you miserable in a bigger house. The go-to choice for "the greatest film of all time" taught us that. Charles Foster Kane (a.k.a. Citizen Kane) may have acquired a mountain of money and a personal museum of the world's finest treasures, but none of it bought back the joy of riding on an oddly named sled at his poor parents' farm. More recently Daniel

Orson Welles' magnum opus Citizen Kane is a good example of the maxim that money can't always buy happiness.

Day Lewis scored a shelf full of awards for his remarkable portrayal of an inordinately competitive oilman whose insatiable drive for wealth left him alone and insane.

IT COULD BE WORSE

If seeing the evils money

Riding the Recession

can cause isn't enough to scare you off the green stuff, you can always take solace in the fact that there's some poor sucker out there worse off than you. John Ford's perennial classic The Grapes Of Wrath depicts a family destroyed by the Great Depression whose poverty is so extreme that not even blue-eyed Henry Fonda can overcome it.

In more contemporary times, Fernando Meirelles' City Of God showed a Brazilian slum in such a dire economic state that pre-teen kids found themselves turning to crime.

POVERTY CHIC

And finally, if nothing else will ease the pain at least you can find comfort in a few memorable films that prove you can be both soul crushingly broke and damn cool. Slumdog Millionaire found Oscar gold in a story of a boy whose charmingly poor upbringing lead directly to a million dollar bank account and true love. Poverty peddler Kevin Smith gave us Clerks, a movie about a group of minimum wage slaves who might wear used cloths, but are still capable of making witty pop culture references that you only wish you could manage.

Those films are good, but the ultimate example of poverty chic is unquestionably John Waters' trash classic Pink Flamingos. The unforgettable movie is about a group of trailer-dwelling yuppies who want nothing more than to be known as the filthiest people alive. Any movie that can transform an impoverished 300-pound transvestite into a movie star demands recognition. If Divine can achieve immortality by eating dog poo for cash, surely you can find a way to survive the recession. Just watch movies until the whole thing blows over. Someone will have to pay you for it eventually. That's my plan.

Boeckner finds time for Furs after Parade

BRYAN BORYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

Being in one of the most sought after Canadian indie bands would be time consuming for even the most organized rocker, but what happens when your side project is just as popular as your day job? That's the challenge Dan Boeckner faces, as a singer in both Wolf Parade and the Handsome Furs.

These days the Montreal-based artist is all about the Furs — the band's new record, Face Control, is out this week — but Wolf Parade isn't far from his mind. "I'm always thinking about stuff for Wolf Parade," says Boeckner. "I have a few things saved up for that band, but basically we finished our last tour and we'll get back together in the fall and write new material together again."

Managing both acts, which he says "is all just projects," isn't easy, but he seems to have figured it out.

He explains that Wolf Parade — which also includes Spencer Krug, another multi-band musician — has evolved to the point where they don't have to sit for months and hammer out material.

"We're at a weird place where Spencer and I don't write songs at home and bring them to the band," says Boeckner. "We have really vague ideas and work through them together in our rehearsal space."

Montreal-based Dan Boeckner and his wife, Alexei Perry, head up Handsome Furs whose latest album, Face Control, hit the shelves this week.

If you go...

- Handsome Furs play the Horseshoe Tavern Friday night as part of Canadian Music Week.

Because Wolf Parade isn't as time consuming as it once was, Boeckner is free "to go into the studio for a couple hours and try to bang something out" for Handsome Furs.

However, the duo's sophomore disc (his wife, Alexei Perry, plays keys), isn't a hastily created album — if anything, it's one of the best records of '09 so far.

In some ways this record picks up where their debut, Plague Park, left off — there are plenty of synths, amped up riffs and infectious melodies — but with dance-friendly drum machine beats, louder songs and a more focused pop approach, Face Control ends up being a vast improvement over their first effort.

Canadian Music Week

Boeckner says the more upbeat feel is thanks to touring behind Plague Park and getting a vital piece of equipment ripped off while on the road. "When we toured that record the band itself got louder and heavier," he explains. "Then the drum machine got stolen and so we had to reprogram everything in the new one, but it ended up reflecting how we were playing at that time."

Despite the volume shift, the band wasn't trying to become some loud indie rock band. If anything they made a concerted effort to not write that type of record. "We didn't want to make an indie rock record," says Boeckner. "We don't even listen to a lot of that. We were in Eastern Europe listening to CDs of early Polish punk and industrial bands — we wanted more punked out songs."

His mission to steer clear from the typical indie sound was accomplished, so what's next for this restless performer? "It's pretty much all Handsome Furs right now, but I'd like to make a dance hall record," he says, seriously.

"But I'm not sure if there's time."

Handsome Furs' latest album, Face Control, was released this week, for Metro's review visit: metronews.ca

Biggest bands getting bigger as they Twitter

SoundCheck

Alan Cross

metronews.ca/soundcheck

Back on Feb. 26, Coldplay fans all over the world followed what was happening at the Brit Awards in real time thanks to Twitter. Every few minutes, someone from the band squirted out a new sub-140 character message to Coldplay fans, who received them on their computers and smart phones. The effect was like an abbreviated play-by-play of the event. Or even private diary thoughts being shared with a select group of people.

After lingering in the shadow of Facebook and MySpace, Twitter has emerged as the communication phenomenon of 2009. It combines the brevity of text messaging with the hyperlinking that makes blogs so useful. It's also a fast and free way for anyone who needs to reach an audience in a fairly intimate way.

I'm getting tweets from Coldplay, Muse, Weezer, Bjork, Oasis and Pearl Jam. I keep up to date with gossip U2 fans, record labels with news to spread and music geeks who link to unusual websites. I'm getting my news faster than ever before — which I think is a good thing. I think.

As a broadcaster with two national radio shows and a music website with international reach, Twitter allows me to keep people up to date on what I'm doing, what I can offer them and how they can participate in stuff that I've got coming up. As I write this, 1,215 people have subscribed to the posts of alancross. Cool!

For example, before I interviewed Iggy Pop and Dave Gahan of Depeche Mode last week, I tweeted my followers (That's what you call people who subscribe to your Twitter posts. How ... messianic.) that if they had any questions for these two guys that they should message me back and I would ask them on their behalf.

The response was staggering. The questions I got from the audience were more heartfelt and honest than anything I could have come up with — and it showed in the answers I got from Iggy and Dave. I'm now amassing questions for my Green Day interview next month.

Might Twitter be here to stay? Or is it another techno-fad doomed to burn out? And this concerns me: On March 3, Twitter went down when the women on The View showed their audience how to use it.

Whoopi on Twitter? That's as bad as finding my mom on Facebook.

Hey Rosetta! primed for Indie

An Independent Music Award would top an already stellar year for East Coast sextet

IAN NATHANSON
for Metro Canada

Should East Coast rockers Hey Rosetta! be victorious at this year's Canadian Independent Music Awards, it would mark a rather lucky streak for the rising Newfoundland-Labrador sextet.

Two weekends ago in Corner Brook, N.L., Hey Rosetta! picked up three East Coast Music Awards for Group Recording, Recording of the Year and Alternative Recording for its 2008 disc Into Your Lungs (and around in your heart and on through your blood).

On Saturday night at Toronto's Fairmount Royal York Hotel, the group will find out what fate bestows upon them for the affectionately dubbed Indies.

"Sometimes you go to some of these industry-oriented festivals in which the shows are closed to the public and there's very little feedback from the crowd," frontman Tim Baker, whose band is up for favourite album and favourite artist/website, tells Metro. "But CMW's cool. At least the shows we've done for it have always been exciting."

The Arkells, from left, Hey Rosetta! and Crystal Castles are all up for honours at the Independent Music Awards this Saturday.

Canadian Music Week

The vibe there is so electric."

tional acts with three nods.

Certainly, the Indies lay claim to acknowledging, promoting and honouring achievements of Canadian and international artists in the independent music sector. Yet both Jean-Phi Goncalves, one-half of Montreal's trip-rock duo Beast, sides with Baker in that it's less about the awards being handed out and more about getting a buzz from the audience reacting to good indie music.

"The people you have in front of you give you this incredible energy, and at the same time you give back this same energy to the crowd," Goncalves says. "I remember our first music industry festival show a couple of years ago. (Singer Betty Bonifassi and I) were so stressed because we were playing to people who didn't really know our music. But somehow we lit a fire and wound up doing well."

Beast will be performing alongside the likes of other nominated contenders such as Arkells, Crystal Castles, The Midway State, USS and Indies Hall of Fame inductees Anvil.

"It's certainly great that industry people will come out to see you play and perhaps might be able to help move your career along," says Dan Griffin, keyboardist-singer-guitarist with the Hamilton-based Arkells. "What they will see at the Indies is a lot of variety — electronica, alt-rock, you name it ... and us sort of representing the classic rock genre. And we look forward to any and all shows — it's essentially what keeps us going."

Fleetwood Mac go their own way on greatest hits tour

MUSIC Aside from their mega-selling hits, Fleetwood Mac is probably best known for their mega-sized personality clashes.

Nearly five years ago, a blockbuster tour ended in acrimony, with singer-songwriter Stevie Nicks vowing she'd never again tour without another woman in the band.

Recent attempts to woo Sheryl Crow to the group reportedly had as much to do with needing a band referee as they did with replacing departed keyboardist/vocalist Christine McVie.

Now the group is on the road again, and Nicks admits that a good part of preparing for a Fleetwood Mac tour involves bracing herself for encounters with old flame Lindsey Buckingham.

But despite their tumultuous history, Nicks says she and Buckingham have been getting along great, as has the rest of the legendary rock band.

"Lindsey has been in incredibly good humour since we started rehearsal on the fifth of January," Nicks said in a conference call with journalists last month as they prepared to kick off their tour, which comes to Canada next week.

"And when Lindsey is in a good humour, everybody is in a good humour. When he's happy, everybody is happy... Everybody has been getting along great."

Writer/director Guy Maddin — whose surreal and wonderful work exemplifies Canadian filmmaking — is behind Night Mayor, a tribute to the iconic and equally Canadian National Film Board.

Canadiana with a surreal touch

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

In a conventional sense, few things are more Canadian than the culturally pure output of the National Film Board but in a less conventional sense, the weird and wonderful work of Winnipeg-based surrealist Guy Maddin (director of The Saddest Music in the World among many, many others) is as well.

And while the thought of marrying these two very different cinematic sensibilities seems pretty abstract, in honour of their 70th anniversary, the powers that be at the NFB have done just that.

The eccentric Maddin is currently helming the short film Night Mayor, a picture that both celebrates the spirit and legacy of the iconic production house while still remaining true to his own unique, nostalgia steeped aesthetic.

"The film is about a guy named Nihad from Bosnia in 1939 who, living in Canada, has invented a primitive form of televi-

"(The NFB is) doing the work that our mainstream films have not been doing ... and I think that's pretty cool."

Guy Maddin

sion," explains Maddin of his experimental tribute. "Drawing on the power of the aura borealis, his machine broadcast images of Canadians to Canadians. There's no script and I don't know how this will turn out, I'm just trying to hypnotize myself into thinking the people in the film are real subjects and that I've just hired myself to make this documentary."

Using the same vintage 16mm equipment and black and white stock utilized by NFB filmmakers in the '30s and '40s, Maddin is hoping his movie will stylistically echo the feel of a real classic Film Board production.

But the question remains: After all these years does the avant garde Maddin really think that the largely ignored NFB still has any real relevance to Canadians?

"It's doing the work that our mainstream films have not been doing," says Maddin, who cites Paul Tomkowicz: Street Railway Switchman as his favourite NFB picture. "And that's mythologizing us as a country. They're doing the job of pop culture and I think that's pretty cool."

SNL skit draws Hawaiian ire

CRITICISM Hawaii's lieutenant governor and some in the state's tourism industry aren't laughing about a Saturday Night Live skit they fear could deter people from visiting the islands.

The four-minute skit, an exaggerated portrayal of how annoying and frustrating it can be to deal with tourists, depicts a pair of disgruntled locals who sing and dance for mainland visitors.

Hawaii Lt.-Gov. James (Duke) Aiona said he's wor-

"The skit went too far in its negative depiction of Hawaii's native people and tourism industry."

Hawaii Lt.-Gov. James (Duke) Aiona

the skit might hurt the state's biggest industry and plans to send a letter in protest to Lorne Michaels, the NBC program's executive producer.

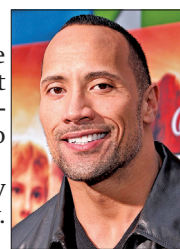

The skit "went too far in its negative depiction of Hawaii's native people and tourism industry,"

Aiona said.

He added he wouldn't let "such distortions go unchecked"

when the economy is doing so poorly.

The sketch broadcast last weekend features Dwayne (The Rock) Johnson, who lived in Hawaii for a year, and SNL comedian Fred Armisen as poorly paid entertainers serenading U.S. mainlanders at a restaurant. Wearing grass skirts, the two make the rounds of dinner tables, while performing sloppy imitations of Hawaiian music and the hula.

Dwayne Johnson

When a woman gushes about being in Hawaii for her honeymoon, telling the entertainers "it must be fun working here," they respond sarcastically.

"Yeah, it's great. They make us wear grass skirts," Armisen says.

"We make $7 an hour. It's a dream job."

Johnson tells one visitor: "It's a fun fact about Hawaii."

"Our biggest export is coffee. And our biggest import is fat white tourists!"

He later deliberately knocks over the drinks of a customer who points to the flower lei around his neck and makes a lame joke about getting "lei-ed."

Despite the criticism, others are laughing: "I thought it was extremely funny," said Augie Tulba, a popular local comedian. "We think that way but we won't come out and say it."

Marvel delays Avengers release

MOVIES Fans of The Avengers will have to wait a little longer to see their favourite superheroes on the big screen.

Marvel Entertainment Inc. said Thursday it will debut the flick May 4, 2012, nearly a year after its previously announced launch date of July 15, 2011.

The Avengers, which features a team of comic book superheroes, will be the culmination of a series of movies based on individual Marvel characters that will be released leading up to it.

Iron Man 2 will launch on May 7, 2010, as scheduled. It will be followed by Thor on June 17, 2011, instead of its previously planned release date of July 16, 2010. The first Avenger: Captain America is now coming out on July 22, 2011 instead of May 6, 2011.

Separately, Marvel confirmed that Spider-Man 4 from Sony Pictures Entertainment, is slated to hit theatres on May 6, 2011.

The new schedule "maximizes the visibility of our single character-focused films, leading to the highly anticipated release of the multi-character The Avengers," said David Maisel, chairman of Marvel Studios, in a statement.

U2 thrills fans with secret show

CONCERT U2 shook a small city and thrilled rabid fans when it gave a private concert in a venue a fraction of the size of the stadiums it plans to fill later this year.

The Irish rock band played the 1,000-seat Somerville Theatre in Davis Square Wednesday night, as fans swarmed the area looking for a way into the show or just a glimpse of the musicians.

The group played five songs, four from its new album, No Line on the Horizon. U2 started off the set with the new song Get on Your Boots. It also played Vertigo.

U2 was big in the Boston area before it was big everywhere, and played the Paradise club in Boston in 1980 during its first North American tour.

"This is where it all began for us, Boston, Mass.," said lead singer Bono, who along with the rest of the band, took written questions from the audience after the performance.

There were several days of rumours and speculation before the location for the concert was revealed. Tickets were long gone by showtime, many through local radio stations.

A pair of lucky fans, JoAnn and Steve Lagasse of Haverhill, said they'd seen the band all around the country. When they learned that tickets were going to be available on the radio for the Somerville concert, they each picked a station and started dialling.

"I bawled, I started crying, in fact I couldn't even speak for a while when (Steve) told me we won," JoAnn Lagasse said.

Jack White forms third band

MUSIC No one can accuse Jack White of being lazy.

The rocker is already a member of The White Stripes and The Raconteurs — and now White says he's formed a third band, The Dead Weather.

White announced the project Wednesday in Nashville and hosted a private party to hear the new CD and see a performance by the group.

He says The Dead Weather's debut album, Hore- hound, will be released in June on his Third Man record label.

Besides White, the new group includes Alison Mosshart of The Kills, Dean Fertita of Queens of the Stone Age and Jack Lawrence of The Greenhorns.

Both Fertita and Lawrence perform with White in The Raconteurs.

Sheryl Crow, Martina McBride and White's partner in the White Stripes, Meg White, were among more than 150 guests at the party.

Afterward, White said the group began as friends getting together to make music.

"The idea was to do a seven-inch single and be done with it but we started writing songs and something happened," he said.

White says the band plans to tour this year.

Brand's big payoff

RAFAEL BRUSILOV
for Metro Canada

Russell Brand is feeling the love these days.

The U.K. comedian is finally starting to hit it big with North American audiences after working himself to the bone for years to carry his success overseas.

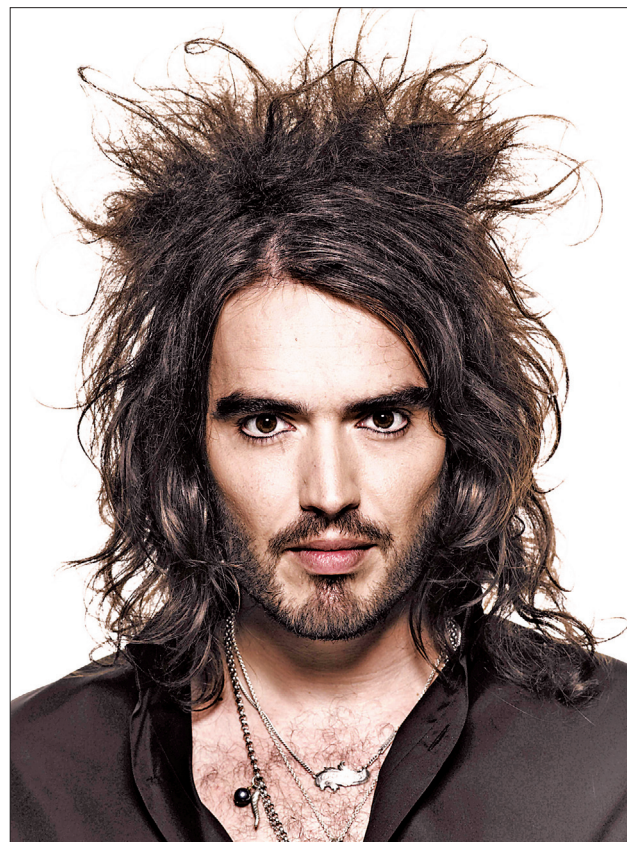

With a television special coming out this weekend, an autobiography already on store shelves and movies with Johnny Depp and Judd Apatow in the pipeline, the effervescent Brand sometimes surprises even himself with his work ethic.

"I work so hard that if I were to go mentally ill, I don't think I'd notice," Brand joked.

An admitted former drug addict before finding success as a television host in Britain, Brand scored a scene-stealing breakthrough performance in comedic flick Forgetting Sarah Marshall and hosted the 2008 MTV Video Music Awards. The latter gig in particular provided him with plenty of material for his stand up act, from being asked by producers to avoid obvious questions about Britney Spears' sanity to soaking up hate mail from foul-mouthed viewers unhappy with Brand's mockery of George W. Bush. Still, he says hosting the show was a blast and kept him on his toes.

"It was fantastic actually — it was a challenge, but very exciting," Brand said.

Brand says audiences in North America have been responding well and contrary to popular belief, the types of jokes that work here are seldom different from the ones that hit it big in the U.K. The only real difference, Brand says, is in how raucous the crowd can get.

"There's almost no difference, except here they laugh more," he said.

Brand describes his comedy style as confessional, with a healthy dose of spiritual (and sexual) escapades. He grew up worshipping comedians who were ahead of their time, such as Richard Pryor and Bill Hicks, and says he's always been conscious of carving his own niche.

Britney spears opens her March 3 concert with her new album's title track, Circus, wearing a ringmaster-inspired costume.

Spears' Canuck costumes

Canadian duo DSquared2 behind pop star's 'wild' outfits

It wasn't just Britney Spears' showmanship that dazzled a sold-out crowd of 16,000-plus fans on the first leg of her Circus tour in New Orleans.

Everyone in the audience was also awestruck by the array of creative costumes unleashed throughout the night.

Designed by Dean and Dan Caten — the Canadian duo behind the global fashion label DSquared2 — Britney's one-of-a-kind creations ran the gamut from primal to militaristic. The twin brothers, who dressed Britney's idol, Madonna, for her 2001 Drowned World tour, played up the pop princess' "big top" motif, creating stage outfits they call "totally wild."

"It's a metamorphosis from animal to ringmaster to slave, in keeping with the circus theme," Dan explains.

The outfits certainly had the desired effect. Whether it was the costumes or simply her new, positive outlook, after a five-year absence from the stage, the pretty mother of two showed the world that she's back and ready to take control.

Crystal bra

• Britney Spears' dazzling Circus outfits also included a sparkling bra from Dutch designer Marlies Dekkers. Designed with black crystals, the piece spells out the famous Swarovski line "CRYSTALLIZEDTM — Swarovski Elements."

the hot ticket

by Enza Anderson

Enza brings Metro readers the weekly scoop on Toronto's hottest parties and events.

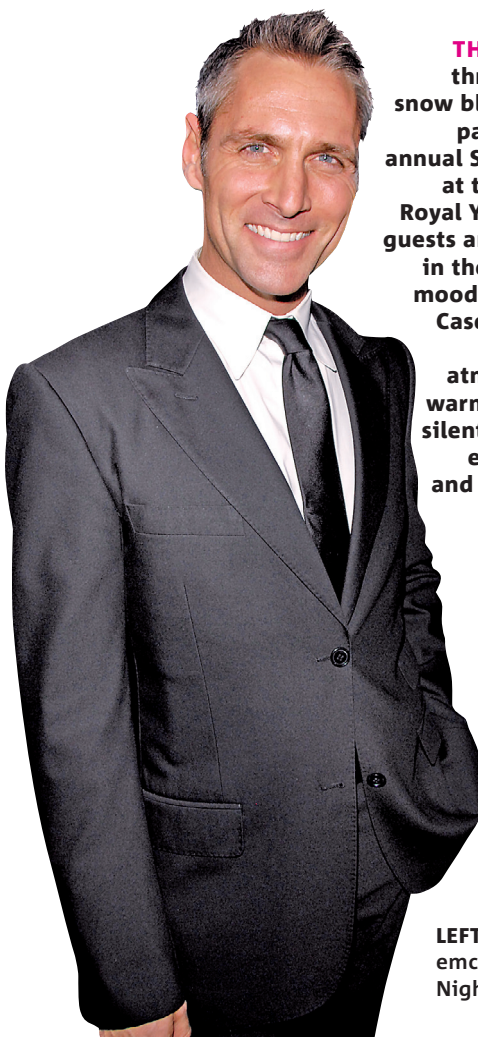

If you would like your event featured in the hot ticket, email enza.supermodel.anderson@gmail.com.

Gala guests Troy Wournell and Casie-Lea Carpenter.

Gala guests Kitty McKechnie and Victor Landoni.

THERE WAS NO threat of winter snow blanketing this party. The sixth annual Snowball Gala at the Fairmount Royal York Hotel put guests and honorees in the fundraising mood in support of Casey House. The chilling night atmosphere was warmed up with a silent auction, live entertainment and a disco dance after-party.

Award recipient Dr. Jane Philpott and husband Pep Philpott.

Going Out

A liberating outlook

Second City's latest sketches offer recession relief

Okay, maybe the recession didn't exactly end Wednesday night, but it sure seemed like it, thanks to the waves of hysterical approbation that swept through the Second City Theatre on the occasion of the opening of their latest show, 0% Down, 100% Screwed.

It's been a long time since our city's prime satirists have had raw material with enough substance to really set their bile flowing, but the moment has finally come and — praise the Lord! — they're all certainly up to the task.

Led by director Melody A. Johnson with a sleek, dark speed that often makes it seem like Blade Runner — the Revue, this is the fastest, funniest and yet most scathing of all recent Second City shows.

It all begins with an opening number where the cast are on a chain gang, imprisoned by the recessionary concerns that dog every one of us, but instead of provoking groans or silence, each sally of despair is met with liberating laughter. For once, someone isn't trying to cheer us out of our gloom, they're meeting it head-on.

A brilliant taxicab encounter between Reid Janisse and Darryl Hinds has the passenger as a self-indulgent suburbanite worrying about the price of beer while the driver calmly catalogues the terrors he's lived through in the Middle East.

And political satire comes home to roost on Sussex Drive when Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama show up for dinner with Stephen Harper and his wife.

"It must be tough not to be elected to your position," Harper taunts Clinton.

"Tell me about it, Mr. 42 per cent," counters the icy American.

Everything is on the table here, but even the customary Second City relationship sketches have hidden edges, like one where a do-good liberal couple faces the reality of what their adopted children from Mexico, Nunavut and Palestine might really be like. ("Oh no," wails Marty Adams as the Mexican kid, "not only is your food dull, but now I'll have to listen to Nickelback!")

- Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 8 p.m. — $23
- Friday at 8 p.m., Saturday at 8 p.m. & 10:30 p.m. — $28
- Sunday at 7 p.m. — $23
- Show runs until July 31

Hillary and hones her patented blond bitchiness to a fine art, while newcomer Caitlin Howden shows an impressive skill set, especially as an unstoppably verbose Quebecois politician.

If laughter truly is the best medicine, then 0% Down, 100% Screwed is just what we need right now to cure our winter blahs and heal our recession blues.

Cyrus fan club dispute settled

SETTLEMENT Pennsylvania fans of Miley Cyrus and her alter ego, Hannah Montana, will get their fan club memberships extended for four months at no charge under a settlement with Attorney General Tom Corbett.

Corbett says more than 700 Pennsylvanians complained they didn't get early access to concert tickets through Cyrus' Mileyworld.com website when they paid a $29.95 yearly membership fee.

Many fans were shut out of a sold-out concert in Pittsburgh in January 2008.

Lawyers for Interactive Marketing of Nashville, Tenn., approved the deal.

The company runs the website but doesn't acknowledge wrongdoing in the settlement filed in Pittsburgh. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An indie traveller's guide to the Caribbean

If all-inclusive resort stays bore you to tears, strike out on your own

DAVID WHITLEY
for Metro Canada

For many of us, the Caribbean equates to resorts, cruise ships and neatly packaged up holidays. But with so many islands offering so many different experiences, it seems a bit of a shame to not attempt a bit of an island hop.

Despite the focus on package tourism, it is surprisingly easy to travel around the Caribbean independently — it's just a case of knowing where to look.

Getting there

The first step of island hopping is choosing the first base. It will invariably work out cheaper to go in a circle, arriving at and departing from the same Caribbean island with a return flight from Canada, perhaps via a hub in the U.S. Major Caribbean entry

Exploring a bay in St. John, U.S. Virgin Islands. If you're looking to find your own way around the Caribbean on a budget, then local buses, family-run guesthouses and the fare served up at beach shacks and rum shops will be among the services you'll rely on.

points are Antigua, Sint Maarten, St. Lucia, Jamaica and Puerto Rico.

It may be worth paying slightly extra to start at one of the smaller islands in the Lesser Antilles (such as Sint Maarten or Antigua), as flights between the smaller islands tend to be much cheaper.

Sites such as Skyscanner

"With so many islands so close together, it would seem logical there would be good ferry services between them. Alas, logic doesn't always apply to the Caribbean."

skyscanner.net and Kayak kayak.com are useful starting points for prices and routes.

Getting around

With so many islands so close together, it would seem logical that there would be good ferry services between them. Alas, logic doesn't always apply to the Caribbean.

Good services can be found in between the U.S. Virgin Islands and British Virgin Islands and between islands in the same nation (such as St. Kitts and Nevis). Otherwise, there are services between St. Martin and Anguilla, St. Barths and Saba, a highly unreliable occasional service from Antigua to Montserrat and L'Express des Iles, express-des-iles.com. The latter ploughs between St. Lucia, Martinique, Dominica and Guadeloupe.

Given the perplexing lack of sea transport, small prop planes are the most common way to get between islands. Island-hoppers will almost inevitably end up on a LIAT flight, liatairline.com, at some point.

It serves 21 Caribbean destinations, but be warned — it has colloquial nicknames such as Leave Island Any Time and Luggage In Another Territory.

Its major hubs are Barbados, Antigua and Trinidad, and the further in advance the tickets are bought, the cheaper they tend to be.

Other airlines that you may come across are American Eagle (San Juan, Puerto Rico), WinAir (St Martin) and Air Jamaica.

On-island transport

Car hire is available on just about every island in the region, and most of the time it just involves signing a few documents and handing over a small sum at the local police station.

Taxis are also readily available, but can get quite expensive. Often a cost-effective measure is to group together with two or three other travellers and hire a driver for the day at a pre-agreed price. By far the most fun option, however, is taking a local bus.

These aren't buses as we'd recognize them — they're usually brightly painted mini-vans that plough a set route, picking passengers up absolutely anywhere on the way. They're cheap, but expect to be sandwiched into a small seat, surrounded by pets and shopping bags, whilst ear-splitting reggae or soca music blasts out of the stereo. Generally the routes link major towns, and they often don't go near isolated resort areas.

Accommodation

The Caribbean islands aren't all about resorts — although your travel agent probably doesn't want you to know that. Even on the most expensive islands, there are usually options for those travelling on a lower budget.

These are usually small, family-run guesthouses that aren't particularly flash, but they're usually clean, and do the job nicely. It's rare to find such guesthouses on the beach — they're usually a couple of blocks back or in towns — but rooms can usually be found for under $80 per night.

Finding out about these guesthouses can be the problem but there are a few places to look. Some will show up on kayak.com, but they usually need to be contacted by phone. Hostel-world, hostelworld.com, is a better bet. Lonely Planet's Caribbean Islands lists a decent selection, while the tourist board websites of the individual islands usually have a list of accommodations.

An aerial view of Antigua's coastline. Small prop planes are the most common way to get between islands in the Caribbean.

Eating out

Food can be inordinately expensive in the Caribbean — particularly given that the quality isn't always that good. The secret is to avoid the restaurants and go where the locals go.

Shabby-looking cafés, beach shacks and rum shops will usually provide a good feed without breaking the bank. Menu choices will be limited (often either "the chicken" or "the fish") and you'll get heartily sick of rice and peas after a couple of weeks, but the portions are usually fairly big.

The classic example is in Grand Anse, St Martin. The village is crammed with hugely expensive restaurants, but the lolos (little wooden shacks) that sit near them serve up pretty good fare on the cheap.

Celebrity Buzz*Custody fight finalized

DIVORCE Madonna and Guy Ritchie have finalized their custody battle in the U.S. after a hearing at Manhattan Supreme Court, according to the British paper the Sun. Lourdes, Rocco and adopted son David Banda will live with their mother in New York and make regular visits to the U.K. to see their father. The boys will also spend school holidays in England with Ritchie, but 12-year-old Lourdes, Madonna's daughter from a previous relationship, will stay stateside.

METRO WORLD NEWSHasselhoff's ex arrested for DUI

POLICE David Hasselhoff's ex-wife could have used a little help from Kitt from Knight Rider on Wednesday evening. The actor's ex, Pamela Bach, was arrested for felony DUI in Los Angeles, police records show, people.com reports. Bach, 46, was arrested at 9 p.m. and booked at the Van Nuys, Calif., jail at around midnight.

She was released three hours later after posting $100,000 bail.

METRO NEWS SERVICEMayer splits with Aniston ... again?

RELATIONSHIP Rumours are flying that Jennifer Aniston and John Mayer have called it quits once again.

"He broke up with her when she got back from her European tour," a source tells E! News. Neither star's rep is commenting on the split, but friends of Aniston caution that the pair shouldn't be written off completely, as they've broken up in the past.

But Aniston might see things differently: "Who ever said that every relationship has to last forever? That's hoping too much," the actress recently said to Britain's You magazine.

METRO WORLD NEWSBrown's manager denies romance

ALLEGATIONS Chris Brown's manager Tina Davis denies sending the three-page text message that started his alleged assault against Rihanna, usmagazine.com reports.

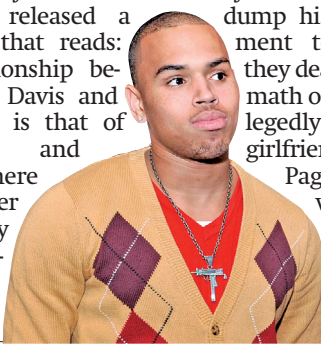

According to TMZ.com, Davis and Brown — who are 20 years apart in age — had an intimate relationship.

Davis' lawyer Marshall B Grossman released a statement that reads: "The relationship between Ms. Davis and Mr. Brown is that of manager and client. There has never been any other relationship. The rumors in circulation are false. There are no emails between Ms. Davis and Mr. Brown of the type which have been described in media reports."

Meanwhile, Chris Brown and Rihanna may be staying together, but there are some other folks with whom he's allegedly looking to part ways. Brown is looking to dump his crisis management team over how they dealt with the aftermath of his arrest for allegedly assaulting his girlfriend, according to

Page Six. "Chris wanted to apologize much earlier," a source says. METRO NEWS SERVICES

Paris dying for New Moon role

ACTING Paris Hilton is "desperate" to star in New Moon, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The House of Wax star — who was given the dubious honour of three trophies for Repo! The Genetic Opera and The Hottie And The Nottie at this year's Razzie awards — has reportedly been bombarding the vampire franchise's star Robert Pattinson with calls in a bid to secure a role. A source told America's Star magazine: "She has also had her manager call the casting agent to lobby for a part on her behalf. Paris is desperate for people to take her seriously as an actress."

METRO NEWS SERVICES*DJ AM wasn't set for doomed flight

RUMOUR Adam Goldstein, a.k.a. DJ AM, has dismissed reports he was booked on the doomed Continental Flight 3407 and escaped what would have been his second deadly plane crash in six months, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Internet reports on Wednesday suggested the 35-year-old had a seat on the Feb. 12 flight from Newark, N. J., which crashed as it approached Buffalo Niagara International Airport. The tragic accident killed all 49 passengers and crew on board and one person on the ground.

It was claimed DJ AM cancelled at the last minute and made the journey by car instead, but the star's publicist insists the rumours are false, stating, "DJ AM was never booked on the Continental flight that crashed last month, in fact he was performing that evening in NYC. That crash nor the one he was involved in, has prevented him from flying — although he has tremendously scaled back his east coast residencies to focus on his recovery."

Goldstein and his pal Travis Barker were the only survivors of a plane crash in South Carolina last September, which left four dead.

METRO NEWS SERVICESPhoenix flips out

INCIDENT Taking a cue from other unruly hip-hop stars, Joaquin Phoenix jumped into the crowd of a Miami Beach club early yesterday and confronted an audience member who was heckling him, people.com reports.

A disheveled Phoenix, 34, came out onstage smoking a cigarette and sporting his now trademark beard, according to The Associated Press. He was rapping unintelligibly when he became agitated, said, "We have a (double-expletive) in the audience," and jumped down into the packed LIV nightclub at the Fontainebleau Miami Beach hotel.

"I saw the guy screaming at Joaquin, and Joaquin just came down," Jorge Lledo, 30, of Miami Beach told The AP. While it was not immediately clear whether the two men exchanged any blows, security guards immediately swarmed and dragged Phoenix back on stage before escorting him away.

Metro Recipe of the Day

Beef and Mushroom Stroganoff

INGREDIENTS:

- 2 tbsp (25 ml) extra-virgin olive oil
- 3 cups (750 ml) halved mushrooms
- 1 red pepper, seeded and cut into fine strips
- 1 1/2 cups (375 ml) small broccoli florets
- 2/3 cup (150 ml) beef stock, preferably homemade
- 1 onion, sliced
- 10 oz (300 g) beef tenderloin, cut into thin strips
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) brandy
- 3 tbsp (45 ml) bottled grated horseradish (optional)
- 2/3 cup (150 ml) sour cream
- Salt and fresh-ground black pepper

METHOD:

- Heat half the oil in large pot over medium heat. Add mushrooms and sauté until beginning to soften, 2 minutes. Stir in red pepper and broccoli florets and continue to sauté, stirring, 3 to 4 minutes.

- Pour in stock and bring to boil. Reduce heat, cover pot, and simmer 5 minutes or until broccoli is just tender.
- Meanwhile, heat remaining 1 tbsp (15 ml) oil in large frying pan over high heat. Add onion and sauté 5 minutes or until soft and beginning to brown.
- Add beef strips to onions and sauté 1 minute or until beef begins to change colour. Stand back from pan, pour in brandy. 5. Stir in horseradish, if using, and sour cream. Add vegetables with their cooking liquid. Stir well and season to taste. Serve with rice pilaf, tagliatelle or boiled new potatoes.

Notice of Commencement of Terms of Reference

Gardiner Expressway and Lake Shore Blvd. Reconfiguration, Environmental Assessment and Integrated Urban Design Study, Waterfront Toronto and City of Toronto

Waterfront Toronto and the City of Toronto (City) are jointly initiating an environmental assessment (EA) and integrated urban design study to explore the feasibility of removing the elevated Gardiner Expressway from approximately Jarvis Street to Logan Avenue. It is the shared goal of Waterfront Toronto and the City to realize the full potential of Toronto's waterfront as a world-class location in which to live, work and play.

This study will examine how a potential reconfiguration of the Gardiner Expressway and Lake Shore Boulevard in this area can contribute to the achievement of that goal. The study is being initiated under the Ontario Environmental Assessment Act (EA Act).

The Process

This study will be carried out in accordance with the requirements of the EA Act. The first step in the process is the preparation of a Terms of Reference (ToR). The ToR will set out the proponent's framework and work plan for addressing the EA Act requirements when preparing the EA; including such things as the alternatives and urban design criteria that will be considered and the public consultation activities that will be carried out. If approved by the Minister of the Environment, the ToR will provide the framework and requirements for the preparation of the EA.

Consultation

The involvement of the public, agencies and other interested persons in determining what the ToR should include is a fundamental objective of this study. Waterfront Toronto and the City encourage all members of the public, agencies and other interested persons to actively participate in the planning process by attending consultation opportunities or contacting staff directly with comments or questions.

Waterfront Toronto and the City are committed to including the public in this study through consultation opportunities designed to occur throughout the planning process. Communication of these consultation opportunities will be done through newspapers, direct mail, and a website. The consultation process and the study's progress will be kept up to date on the website hosted by Waterfront Toronto. Public events will be held in various locations throughout the city. The first round of public meetings will take place on March 28, March 30, April 2 and April 4. The second round of public meetings will be scheduled for late April. Notices will be placed in the local media to advertise these events.
